Crazy Good Dressing seasoned olive oil

Simple enough to use in place of plain olive oil, but with enough flavor to work as a salad dressing, this locally made everything condiment will become your new kitchen go-to! The special blend of cold-pressed olive oil, two proprietary vinegars, pepper, and lemon adds depth and taste without the sugar and sodium that many bottled dressings and marinades rely on.

Meati meat alternatives

These plant-based meat alternatives match the protein and the texture of pork and beef. What's their secret? They use a hearty and nutritious strain of mushroom mycelia (think mushroom roots) that doesn't just have a similar texture to meat when prepared correctly, it also imparts a lot of the same health benefits like protein and iron.

Muir Glen chili starter

With these canned tomato blends, all you have to add is beans and meat to get homemade chili on the table. And with the weather getting colder, who isn't starting to think about chili? Don't forget to grab a fresh baked roll or pretzel bun from the Bakehouse for dipping!

Patagonia Provisions crackers

We already love Patagonia Provisions' Kernza® pasta, so we're excited to share their new line of delicious organic snack crackers! Made with the same careful sourcing as their pasta and packaged seafood, these crackers are great for dipping into your favorite spreads, topping with your favorite cheese, or just eating straight from the box. Look for sourdough sea salt, rosemary garlic, and margherita pizza flavors.
