Local organic sweet corn

It's hard to overestimate just how delicious Minnesota sweet corn gets. But the window for when it's in season is small, so be sure to enjoy it now, whether grilled on the cob or tossed into corn salad.

Humble potato chips

The environmental promises that organic chip maker Humble makes are anything but humble! They use the whole potato, skins and all, to cut back on food waste (without sacrificing flavor). Even cooler, they're Certified Plastic Negative, removing twice the amount of plastic packaging from the environment than they produce.

Seven Sundays granola

This popular local cereal maker is branching into granola as well, starting with two flavors: triple berry and peanut butter-chocolate banana. Seven Sundays is committed to eco-friendly practices like utilizing upcycled oat protein, using recycled packaging, and helping fund regenerative farming initiatives. As if that weren't enough, they're also a Certified B Corporation!

Stellar Snacks pretzels

Start with something as simple and beloved as a pretzel and add a significant dose of wow-inducing flavors. That's the idea behind new Stellar Snacks, which boasts bold flavors like Maui Monk, made with real sweet Maui onions, and Sweet and Sparky, which features a punch-packing buffalo seasoning.

Peterson uncured beef hot dogs

If you're a regular in the meat department, you're probably already familiar with Peterson beef. Their dry-aged, grass-fed and grain-finished steaks and roasts are a staple in many shoppers' baskets. Now this local farm is doubling down on the grilling front, offering uncured, all-beef hot dogs made from the same Limousin beef you love.
